HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1868.

THE ANNAMITE MISSION IT is somewhat significant that just at this moment, when the feeling as regards the coolie trade has attained an unusual height, we should be able to record the arrival of an Annamite mission charged with the duty of thanking the Government of Hongkong for its humanity to a number of unfortunate Annamites who. kidnapped by Macao man-stealers, received from the Government of that Colony treatment against which the Portuguese of Hongkong universally protested. We can easily imagine that this mission, which consists of two Envoys duly accredited to this Government, and a ship's crew of from 90 to 100 men, will be particularly distasteful to coolie dealers of the peninsula, but we can only express our regret that the politically shortsighted inhumanity of the officials of that settlement should have rendered such a mission to Hongkong possible. The Envoys escape from Thibet. The greatest reliance bring with the despatch conveying the must, however, he placed upon the Nepalese thanks of the Ammunite King, sundry presents, which as evidences of his appre ciation of the good feeling displayed in the matter by the Colonial Government will be valuable souvenirs. It is addit tionally interesting to note the fact that the mission has arrived in a steame manned and officered exclusively by Annamites. Many of our readers will doubtless remember the Elfin, which vessel under the name of Shun toil has thus reappeared in her old waters bound upon an errand as creditable to those who have sent her as it is satisfactory to the Colonial Government. To have been the means of restoring some 80 or 90 individuals to their houses and families, and of thereby marking the sense entertained in this Colony of the conduct displayed by those in authority at Macao. is in itself a satisfaction. To have had this service publicly acknowledged, and fresh attention thereby drawn to the enquiry Macao is now so desirous of suppressing, is still more so. The chief of the upper Yang-tse-Kiang, where there of the embassy who bears the letter to His are, we know, numerous Christian com-Excellency from the Annamese King takes one of (it is presumed) lar tenour to a padre at Macao, but Governor Horta has not been recognised by His Annamite Majesty. were drowned in the face of the little band ranged along the river bank to view the spectacle. The Missionaries, however managed to get together a sum of lacks 300, with which they purchased the lives of their flock and received permission to go to Tsa-ta in Batting. The reception of such an account as this naturally provoked wish to rescue these unhappy men from the fate which has dogged their footsteps. Dr Cayley, at Ladakh, endeavoured to secure the assistance of a Grand Lama, and was for the moment successful. The Lana agreed to forward a letter, but subsequently returned it. Attempts were also made to open up a communication with the Missionaries through Sikkim and through guiddya. The Mishmees report the presence of two French Missionaries in the country beyond them, but say a third bas been killed by the Lamas. It is possible I though the hope is a very faint one, that if this tribe think it to their interest to assist the Missionaries, they may effect their Government, which has a Vakeel at Lhassa. Jung Bahadoor has declared his willingness to write letters in their behalf to the Vakeel at Linssa and to the Chinese envoy at the same place, and should their representations be successful, the Nepaleso agent will forward the Missionaries to India through the Wallang Choong pass, a few miles to the west of Sikkim, i e has also undertaken to forward to the nean invitation from the Vicerov to take refuge in Innia, where, in Lahoul, Spiti, and Kulu, they might perhaps establish a mission amongst a population kindred to that of Thibet Whilst, however, these efforts have been made along the whole length of the northern frontier of India to open up communications with these unfortunate men, the French Government has been moved to take up their case, and to support the recommendations and representations in their favor, which the British (1) envoy at Pekin has been requested to make. If the Nepalese representations are successful, the remnants of the Mission will probably find their way into India, whilst if the ambassa. dors at Pekin are successful, the Missionaries will probably withdraw into the valley munities, and where now the protection of the treaty will be an effectual shield to them against the brutality of Chinese officials.

By M Francis: He di I not ask whether the house was built according to the requirements of the Ordinance, but he asked witness to inspect the buildings. He had seen many notices similar to that brought him by Lo Acheung : they are generally addressed to tenants of Lot so-and-so. The buildings were not built according to requirements of the Ordinance, and he believed that there was just cause for issuing the notice -Mr Hazeland: How long ought to have elapsed before the Inspector ought to have seen that the joists were too close — Mr Francis objected, as the witness was not supposed to know anything about what the inspector might do; but witness said that the joists in question were those in the 2nd floor and the roof, and that they could be seen until built upon. On the evidence again touching upon the conversation which passed, Mr Francis again objected to Mr Hazeland asking any questions in that connection : but Mr Hazeland contended that questions had already been asked by Mr F. as to what witness said and he therefore now insisted upon all coming out. > THE BHAMO ROUTE EXPLORATION Friend of India, 9th April. Captain Staden's exploring party has ur fortunately been detained for upwards of a mouth at Bhamo, and only managed to make a start on the 26th of February. In consequence of the murder of the Governo in the late frontier risings, a new officia had to be sent from Mandalay : and unti his arrival the Expedition was unavoidably prevented from starting. Then the new Governor seems to have regulated his progress by astrological observations; it was therefore not until the 20th February that he arrived at Bhamo. Again while the petty officials were perfectly civil and obiging, they indirectly proved obstructive and unmanageable, no doubt through a fanciful fear that their vested interests were in danger. No better corroboration can be found of the earnestness of the Burmese Court to further the Expedition than their exertions to expedite its departure at a time when the unsettled state of the frontier countries would have been a valid reason for deferring it altogether. is satisfactory, however, to see that Captain Sladen's influence with the King did not cease with his departure; for His Majesty turned a deaf ear to a deputation of Chinese residents, who insisted that the object of the Expedition was aggressive, and that the English Government had undertaken champion the cause of the Mussulman rebels in Yunan against their Chinese oppressors. The Chinese merchants in Mandalay have also an interest in the Thenee route : and to their representation ma nv of the false rumours that are agitating the hill tribes against us are no doubt due. Interested Chinese have even gone the ength of putting themselves in communication with sundry well known Dacoit chiefs on the frontier, who have been invited to cut off the party; but as we understand the explorers have got scent of this, they will no doubt be forearmed. A GHOST STORY.

It was the middle of November when we arrived at Martingdale, and found the place anything but romantic or pleasant. The walks were wet and sodden, the trees were leafless, there were no flowers save a few late pink roses blooming in the garden. had been a wet season, and the place looked miserable. Clare would not ask Alice down to keep her company in the winter months, as she had intended; and for myself, the Cronsons were still absent in New Norfolk, where they meant to spend Christmas with old Mrs. Cronson, now recovered. Altogether. Martingdale seemed dreary enough, and the ghost stories we had laughed at while sunshine flooded the rooms, became less unreal, when we had nothing but blazing fires and wax-candles to dispel the the gloom. They became more real also when servant after servant left us to seek situations elsewhere; when " noises" grew frequent in the house; when we ourselves, Clare and I, with our own ears heard the tramp, tramp, the banging and the clattering which had been described to us. My dear reader, you doubtless are free from superstitious fancies. You pooh-pooh the existence of ghosts, and "only wish you could find a haunted house in which to spend a night," which is all very brave and praiseworthy, but wait till you are left in a dreary, desolate old country mansion, filled with the most unaccountable sounds without a servant, with none save an old care taker and his wife, who, living at the extremest end of the building, heard nothing of the tramp, tramp, bang, bang, going on hat of last season's.

At first I imaby a dog; the boy had two letters; he took gined the noises were produced by some gined the noises were produced by some evil-disposed persons, who wished, for purposes of their own, to keep the house uninhabited; but by degrees Clare and came to the conclusion the visitation must be supernatural, and Martingdale by consequence untenantable. Still being practical people, and unlike our predecessors. not having money to live where and how we liked, we decided to watch and see whother we could trace any human fluence in the matter. If not, it was agreed we were to pull down the right wing of the house and the principal staircase. For nights and nights sat up till two or three o'clock in the morning, Clare engaged in needlework, I read ing, with a revolver lying on the table beside me: but nothing, neither sound nor appearance rewarded our vigil. This confirmed my first ideas that the sounds were not supernatural; but just to test the matter. I determined on Christmas-eve. the anniversary of Mr Jeremy Lester's disappearance, to keep watch myself in the red bed-chamber. Even to Clare I never mentioned my intention. About ten, tired out with our previous vigils, we each retired to rest. Somewhat ostentatiously, perhaps, I noisily shut the door of my room, and when I opened it half-an-hour afterwards, no mouse could have pursued its way along the corridor with greater silence and caution than myself. Quite in the dark sat in the red room. For over an hour I might as well have been in my grave for anything I could see in the apartment; but at the end of that time the moon rose and rose and cast strange lights across the floor and upon the wall of the haunted chamber. Hitherto I kept my watch opposite the window, now I changed my place to a corner near the door, where I was shaded from observation by the heavy hangings of the bed, and an autique wardrobe. Still sat on, but still no sound broke the silence I was weary with many nights' watching certain houses adjoining. The man to "square-face" for 50 cents; he knew that and tired of my solitary vigil, I dropped at last into a slumber from which I was awakened by hearing the door softly open-Witness said that a big fat man | soner escaped. > NEW OCEAN CABLES. There are now, besides the Cuba cable and many other smaller ones, two Atlantic cables in operation, a third one on the eve of construction from France to the island of St. Peter's and thence to the United States, and at the present time, says the New York Herald, a company is being organized in England to submerge a fourth cable across the Atlantic, of which Brest, France, and New York will be the termini. This company is called the "Franco-American Submarine Cable Company," and will organize with a capital stock of £900,000 sterling. One third of the stock and directors will be given to England, one third to France and one-third to the United States. The books have been opened in England and its share of the stock subscribed. The French bankers, it is said, have guaranteed the subscription of another third. A contract has already been made with the Iudia and Gutta Percha Telegraph Compay of Silvertown, London, for the manufacture of three thousand seven hundred miles of cable; which will support itself in water a distance of thirty miles. The contractors have taken the English subscription as an advanced payment, and will at once proceed with the manufacture of the cable, which will probably be laid next summer. This new company have received valuable concessions already, including one from the Freuch government, giving them for five years all transatlantic business coming this way that touches French wires, and one from the submarine telegraph Company across the English channel, who agree to give thom all the messages that touch their wires en route for Brest.

In addition to the above the Spanish government talk seriously of laying a cable from Spain to Cuba, and the Colonial Minister at Madrid has been directed by royal decree to take the matter in hand. and he has accordingly invited tenders for a line, to pass southward to the Canaries, across to Porto Rico and Cuba and thence to Mexico, Panama, and South America.

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF A SISTER. - The Court of Assizes of the Seine has just been engaged in the trial of Jean Nicholas Schumacher for the attempted murder of his sister, the Marquise d'Orvault, the cabman's daughter, whose name was recently brought conspicuously before the public by a suit of her parents against her. The prisoner had een employed at the Comptoir d'Escompte: but when he was absent from his post from illness for a few days in September last, the clerk who replaced him discovered some discrepancies in his accounts: Schumacher's books were examined, and found to contain different false entries, by which he had embezzled a sum of 2260f. This money he had spent in dissipation. His mother reimbursed the amount, but the son lost his place. He then remained for some time without occupation, and at length resolved to go to the Isthmus of Suez. in the hope of gelting some situation there. To procure the resources necessary for his voyage he went, on the 20th of November, to his sister, who, although she had not been on friendly terms with her family for some time, consented to receive him. He then declared that he had robbed his employers of 2000f., and asked her to give him the sum to replace the money abstracted. At this moment the 2000f had been already paid by the mother. The marquise hesitated, not believing her brother, and then said that she would go during the day and place the amount to his credit at the Comptoir d'Escompte. : He, however, insisted on her giving it to himself, and on her refusing he drew a revolver from his packet and fired four shots at ber, wounding her in the cheek and shoulder. He then discharged the coutents of two other barrels at himself, but only inflicting very slight injuries on his olicok and nose. The Marquise d'Orvault although more seriously hurt, entirely recovered in about three weeks. Schumacher was immediately arrested, and very coolly remarked to the police that it was only a family affair. In his defence he said that he had taken the pistol to frighten his sister. and that it went off by accident. He was found 'Guilty,' and sentenced to 20 years'
